Solidarity and Dissent

Solidarity, acceptance and understanding are cornerstones of life in communities. Basic values and rules of living together are shared. Different views, ways of life and groups must find room to exist side by side. What happens when, motivated by my personal conviction, I find I have to set myself apart from the others? Is dissent a sign that change is necessary in the community; a change which I can support? Or is it a sign that I myself must learn and evolve? Or is it possible to set myself apart without questioning the others?

People of different faiths respond differently to these questions. Is it because of their faith? Is it because of their culture or personal upbringing and environment? Different responses to these questions make living together more complex. This is why dialogue is necessary.

JCM is a conference which enables an open and direct encounter amongst members of the three Abrahamic faiths. The programme offers various opportunities of communication, creative groups, lectures and religious services of all three traditions.

Our target group includes students and their teachers, as well as all those interested in, and actively committed to, dialogue amongst the three religions.

The languages used during the conference will be German and English.
